

Glenn Rollans

Veteran book publisher Glenn Rollans now co-owns Brush Education, a higher education publisher specializing in medical and health sciences resources.

Before Brush, he has had a long and varied career in publishing, starting as a freelance writer and editor, then Editor-in-Chief at Lone Pine, Director of the U of A Press, partner in Les Éditions Duval/Duval House Publishing, and General Manager at Thomson Duval.

Along the way, he has devoted lots of time to publisher education, including past stints co-directing the Business of Publishing program at the University of Chicago, and directing the Banff Publishing Program at the Banff Centre.

He is a past board member of Access Copyright and the Canadian Educational Resources Council, and past president of the BPAA, and current president of the Association of Canadian Publishers.
